CLASS COMMITTEE.

JAMES RUSSELL CARRET,
Class Secretary.

GEORGE COMBE MANN.
ELIOT CHANNING CLARKE.

Classmates:

Our forty-sixth anniversary finds us with our number diminished during the past six years by the death of nine graduate members, Bryant, Lincoln, Lindsley, Mealey, Montgomery, Silsbee, Spooner, Charles O. Stearns, and Wyman, and two non-graduate members, Ames and Vinal.

The following pages continue the records contained in previous reports of my predecessor.

It seems to me desirable to provide now for the ultimate disposition of the Class Fund when we no longer have any use for it. After our fiftieth anniversary there may be possibly about $2,500. Two obvious courses suggest themselves: first, to add the fund to the fund established for the Class of 1867 Scholarship by our classmate, Hoar, to which other classmates added, notably Fay with a legacy of $1,000 and Peckham with a gift of $2,000; second, to turn it over to the President and Fellows of Harvard College without limitation to use as they see fit. Possibly other ways to use it may be suggested. I expect to bring up the matter for consideration at the coming Class Supper on June 18th, and at a convenient time after Commencement will prepare and send to all members of the Class a circular about it.

I add in an appendix five things which seem to me worthy of preservation,—an interesting reminder of our college days; an amusing letter by E. C. Clarke, which he read at the Class Supper in 1906; two poems written for our fortieth anniversary, one by Peckham, the other by Frank P. Stearns; and an interesting letter from our classmate, Mann, to Mrs. Lincoln, describing our Class Supper on June 27, 1911.

I must express also the interest and pleasure that have come to me in the work of the Secretaryship from your cordial and interesting letters and from the renewal of old ties of friendship and friendly interest.

JAMES RUSSELL CARRET,
Class Secretary.

BIOGRAPHIES.

THEODORE PARKER ADAMS. Born 1845.

Retired from teaching in the year 1906, after a service of thirty-five years in the Cambridge Latin School, his resignation as master having been accepted in June, 1906. He writes that the winter of 1907–08, as in several previous years,

"I passed in Mentone, France, and in travel in Italy, returning to my home in Plymouth summers. My wife died on the voyage home from Europe on 19 April, 1908, and since then I have resided in Plymouth. On 18 December, 1909, I married Alfreda E. Walker, daughter of the late Dr. Alfred E. Walker, of New Haven."

Address: Plymouth, Mass.

SAMUEL PARKER ALLEN. Born 1846.

Continues in the real estate business in Boston. Office at 27 State Street.

Residence: Beacon Chambers, 17 Myrtle Street, Boston.

AMOS PRESCOTT BAKER. Born 1844.

Since the last report he has terminated his interest in the Victor Shaw Ring Traveler Company. Went to Europe in August, 1912, and is now at Lausanne, Switzerland. He met there and has been since with his friend, Herbert J. Pratt (Harvard, 1863), who has spent nearly fifty years of life in travel in foreign countries.

Since he went abroad Baker has been and is somewhat in ill-health, but expects full recovery.

"I am by no means miserable, and prefer to be safely ill than dangerously well."

He expects to go to Australia to visit his eldest son, who has settled there, before returning home.

Address: 37 Newbury Street, Boston.

*GEORGE LEONARD BARTON.

Born in Gill, Mass., November 6, 1845; died in Turner's Falls, Mass., February 19, 1879. (See Secretary's Report No. 6, of 1879, p. 8.)

CLEMENT BATES. Born 1845.

Lawyer in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Address: Atlas Bank Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

JAMES THACHER BOUTELLE. Born 1845.

Physician in Hampton, Va.

Address: Hampton, Va.

The Secretary takes the following from a letter recently received from him:—

"My history for the past ten years has been long attacks of illness with intervening periods of convalescence, until I became a chronic invalid, and have been unable to do any active practice for the last three years."

About a year and a half ago he had an attack of optic neuritis, which threatened total blindness, but he recovered from that, though he has been unable to read anything since the first attack. About a month ago he went through an operation for the removal of a tumor from the right side of his neck, and was able to be taken home from the hospital in a week, and hopes in time to regain some of his strength.

"I wish that I was able to be present at the coming Class Supper, but that of course is impossible. You must give my love to the boys, and say I wish them all health and happiness."

*ARTHUR BROOKS.

Born in Boston, June 11, 1845. Died at sea, on the voyage from Southampton to New York, July 10, 1895. (See Secretary's Report No. 10, of 1897, p. 10.)

*FREDERICK EUGENE CLAGHORN BRYANT.

Born in New Bedford, Mass., February 8, 1845, the son of Frederick and Helen Maria (Whitman) Bryant, and passed his boyhood and youth in his native place. In college he took an interest in baseball, playing third base in the nine of the Class in a game Harvard '67 vs. Brown '67 at Providence, R.I., June 25, 1864, in which Harvard was victorious, and played on a nine of the Class in the Sophomore year. He was gifted with a fine tenor voice, and was sought on all occasions when music was desired.

After graduation he studied law in Boston and at the Harvard Law School, was admitted to the bar in February, 1870, and settled in Boston to practise his profession, living for some years in Boston and later in Hingham.

On September 16, 1873, he married Clara M. Crosby, of Hingham. Three children were born to him: (Eugene) Lincoln Bryant, born July 18, 1874 (a graduate of Harvard of the Class of 1895); Ethel May Bryant, born January 8, 1876; and Guy Bryant, who died December 26, 1887.

He practised law in Boston until December 1, 1888, when he went to the city of Superior, Wis., to continue the practice of his profession. He became President of the First Warehouse and Forwarding Company at West Superior in 1889. In April, 1891, he was elected for a two years' term Judge of the Municipal Court of the city of Superior and Douglas County, Wis. Later he made his home in West Superior. He was a delegate from West Superior to the first Waterway to the Sea, Convention held at Detroit, Mich., in , and was one of the originators of the Normal School at West Superior. His love of music and of song continued, as he told the Secretary in one of his letters that he had written for and sung at every bar banquet given by the Douglas County Bar of Wisconsin since its formation.

In the year 1900 he removed to St. Paul, Minn. Soon after his health failed, and he continued in broken health until his death at St. Paul on March 25, 1913.

NOTE.—After graduation he dropped his third name, and called himself Frederick Eugene Bryant, and so appears in the Secretary's Reports No. 3 to No. 8 consecutively, inclusive.

*WILLIAM AUGUSTUS BUNTON.

Born in Manchester, N.H., June 7, 1846. Died in Great Falls, Montana, July 20, 1893. (See Secretary's Report No. 10, of 1897, p. 15.)

JAMES RUSSELL CARRET. Born 1845.

Continues in the practice of law in Boston in partnership with Robert T. Hay. In January, 1908, he was elected President of the Massachusetts Single Tax League, and continued to hold the position until October, 1912, when he declined re-election, feeling that he could not give to it the time requisite for the proper performance of the duties of the office. From December, 1907, until July, 1911, he held the position of Secretary of the Massachusetts Direct Legislation League, but then resigned the office for the same reason as in the case of the Single Tax League. He is also a member of the Executive Committee of the American Free Trade League, and has been such for a period of eight years, and was a member of it earlier during the period 1893–97. Was elected Class Secretary in September, 1911, as successor to our lamented classmate, Lincoln. Removed from Lexington, Mass., to Cambridge, Mass., in October, 1911.

His son, Philip L. Carret, is about to take the Harvard entrance examinations.

Address: Residence, 10 Bellevue Avenue, Cambridge.

Office: 79 Milk Street, Boston.

HEMAN WHITE CHAPLIN. Born 1847.

Lawyer.

He removed from Westwood, Mass., to Washington, D.C., about ten years ago, retaining an office in Boston until June, 1912. His daughter, Christine Chaplin, has been studying drawing and painting continuously for five years past, the greater part of the time at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia, but for the past year in the Grande Chaumière Academy in Paris. She is a member of the Fellowship of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. His elder son, Robert Tappan Chaplin, is just completing his Freshman year, with high standing, at Princeton. He is on the Freshman football squad, and is a member of the "Clio Hall" Society. His younger son, Henry Dunster Chaplin (not named after the first President of Harvard College), is to enter Princeton in September. His chief interest in athletics is in football.

He writes:—

"At the age of sixty-five, last fall I took up golf, on the links of the Washington Country Club, in a very beautiful high-lying rolling Virginia country, a few miles out of Washington. I played all through the winter (as one can do in this climate) with increasing pleasure. Inquiries as to the score are not in order."

He adds:—

"My boys were prepared for college with a view, at the outset, to Harvard. Owing, however, to certain cordial associations resulting from their having lived for ten years past in Washington, they leaned strongly to Princeton, and it seemed to me best, on the whole, to let them follow their own instinct in the matter. Robert, who has now been at Princeton for a year, has enjoyed college life there immensely. While I have yielded up my preference, I get this by-product, of great value to me, that my boys, while at Princeton, are only a little over four hours from Washington. The teaching at Princeton, even in the Freshman year, is evidently very spirited; and my boy who is there now finds the other boys in his class (of about three hundred and fifty), as a whole, extremely attractive and agreeable."

Address: 2206 Q Street, N.W., Washington, D.C.

WINTHROP LOUIS CHENERY. Born 1845.

In a letter to the Secretary dated May 13, 1913, he says:—

"I am still in the insurance business in Belmont, as for many years. In March, 1908, I declined a re-election to the offices of Town Clerk and Town Treasurer of Belmont, which I had held for twenty-five and thirty-two years respectively, and since that time I have devoted my time to my own business and that of the Belmont Savings Bank, with which I have been connected since its organization. In January, 1911, I was chosen a Trustee of the above-named institution, having been Treasurer from the beginning of its career. On the occasion of the semi-centennial of the incorporation of the town in 1909, I prepared a historical sketch,—a fact which speaks volumes for the scarcity of 'literary fellers' among us. I sent a copy of same to Lincoln, which you will probably find among the archives of '67, and it may prove useful to you in case of an attack of insomnia."

Address: Belmont, Mass.

JOSEPH RICHMOND CHURCHILL. Born 1845.

Lawyer in Boston and Justice of the Municipal Court of the Dorchester District of Boston.

The Secretary quotes as follows from a letter from him dated May 12, 1913:—

"I almost regret to say that I am booked for a trip to Europe, sailing from New York May 20 for Naples, so I shall be unable to attend the Class Supper or any other college festivities, though with our fast diminishing numbers I feel it to be more and more the duty of those who remain to get together. Please remember me to my classmates. As to the new Class Report, I cannot discover any new facts or change whatever which will be of any interest. 'Residence, business, and occupation' remain the same as in the last Report, only some years older, like the rest."

Address: Office, 16 State Street, Boston.
Residence: 32 Percival Street, Dorchester.

HERBERT CODMAN CLAPP. Born 1846.

Physician in Boston.

In June, 1909, he moved his office from 334 Commonwealth Avenue (formerly occupied by him both as office and residence) to 419 Boylston Street, Boston, and his residence to 67 Winchester Street, Brookline. That "was the first time in my professional career that I separated my office from my residence. Possibly I may have written Lincoln at the time that in the summer of 1907 I gave up my active participation in the work of treating tuberculosis patients at the State Sanatorium at Rutland. Otherwise, I am going on with my medical work about as before, with special reference to Diseases of the Lungs and Heart. The two older of my three daughters are married, and the oldest of them has two children."

Address: Office, 419 Boylston Street, Boston.
Residence: 67 Winchester Street, Brookline.

FRANKLIN JUDSON CLARK. Born 1842.

Retired from business in September, 1894, and removed to Farmington, Me., where he resides. A letter from him to the Secretary dated May 28, 1913, says:—

"In regard to the forthcoming Class Report, I would say that conditions have not changed with me since the last Report, and I have no personal information of any particular interest."

Address: Farmington, Me.

ELIOT CHANNING CLARKE. Born 1845.

He retired from active business in April, 1904. He says in a letter to the Secretary:—

"Life has been rather uneventful with me during the last six years. The milestones, as I pass them, seem nearer together, and the road somewhat monotonous. I am trustee for some estates and director in a few companies, which affords a slight occupation. I wrote a little book on Astronomy,* of which about eight thousand copies have been sold.

I have a farm and several saddle horses. Thus far these have helped me to cheat my doctor out of any considerable portion of my income."

Address: Office, 817 Exchange Building, 53 State Street, Boston.

Residence: 15 Brimmer Street, Boston.

JOHN HOUGHTON CLARKE. Born 1844.

Residence and address: 2 Winter Street, Framingham, Mass.

* "Astronomy from a Dipper," by Eliot C. Clarke, with charts by the author. Houghton Mifflin Company. Published October, 1909.

CLEMENT CLEVELAND. Born 1843.

Physician and Surgeon in New York City.

Took a three months' trip to Europe with his wife in July, August, and September, 1912. He writes:—

"I am still working hard, and seem to be able to do as much surgical work as when I was younger. I am very happy in it, and propose to die in harness. I am a happy grandfather in possessing four grandchildren."

He is planning for another trip abroad with his wife, sailing on June 26th and returning on August 30th.

From a letter just received from him, the Secretary learns that a meeting was held at his house on April 23, 1913, of which he was chairman, as a first step toward a national organization to diminish the ravages of cancer. Few people realize that the proportion of deaths from cancer in our country is greater now than in former years, and that the number of deaths from it is greater than from tuberculosis, "the white plague." As a result of the meeting, an organization has been formed, "Society for the Control of Cancer," with headquarters in New York, which will conduct a campaign of education to reach not only the people, but the physicians in every quarter of our country, even the remotest.

He writes also in the letter:—

"The only thing about it where I personally come in is that I have been rather active in its formation and am chairman of the Executive Committee and one of the Vice-Presidents."

Address: Office, 40 East 41st Street, New York City.
Residence: 925 Park Avenue, New York City.

SILAS PARSONS COOK. Born 1845.

Clergyman. The Secretary's Report of 1907 says:—

"As minister for Berkshire County, he has oversight of about forty churches. Probation officer for Berkshire County of the Superior Court."

For a report of his work see Mann's letter to Mrs. Lincoln in the Appendix.

Address: 82 Lenox Avenue, Pittsfield, Mass.

ERNEST WATSON CUSHING. Born 1847.

Physician in Boston. The Secretary quotes an interesting letter received from him, dated June 4th inst.:—

"Replying to your question as to my life since 1907, I have little to say that will interest any one but myself. I have quietly got older, and, accepting the fact, I have concluded to accept the advice of Dante to 'let down the sails as we approach the port.' So this year I have resigned from my Professorship at Tufts College Medical School after twenty years' service, and from the Woman's Charity Club Hospital after twenty-two years' service, but I keep busy in my own hospital, and take all I get in the way of Surgery. In spite of the fact that the profession is 'infested' with young doctors, I get my share, and am as well able as ever to do my work. I am not writing any articles now for publication. Perhaps I am getting lazy. Cui bono; let the youngsters work and write on the new topics; 'Juniores ad labores.' I have done my share. Still I have to do something, for I fully believe with Cicero de Senectute that the way to keep the brain in order is to work it, so as not to become 'comicus stultus senex.' So about 1907 I took up Italian vigorously until I could read and speak it well. Then some three years ago I began on Greek. I thought I was old enough to have some fun without any thought of utility, and as I gave up Greek in 1865 with regret, as I knew I had to earn a living and study things to fit me to do so, so some three years ago I took it up again. First I read through all I had read in school and college, then I read through Xenophon's Memorabilia and Hellenica, then all of Herodotus, and so worked up to Plato. Besides the Apologia and Crito that we read in College, I have read the Symposium, Gorgias, Phedras, and Menon. I also have been reading modern Greek, and have my monthly magazine and daily paper in modern Greek. By working my old head in this way, my memory improves instead of falling off, and so I live and wait, very happy and very contented. I live now out in Jamaica Plain, a nice old estate right opposite the pond, with land enough for flowers and tennis court for the young people. Much blessed in a loving wife and five devoted daughters,—two of whom are married and have given me three beautiful grandchildren,—with enough money to pay my bills and not enough to make me foolish, I seem to have everything I need, and that is all I want. And so like old Laertes, the father of Odysseus, 'Old age comes softly upon me,' for all of which I am devoutly thankful."

Address: Office, 168 Newbury Street, Boston.
Residence: 80 Pond Street, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

LEONARD FRANCIS CUTTER. Born 1847.

The Secretary received from our classmate, Garbutt, on June 13, 1913, a letter of which the following is a copy:—

Los Angeles, Cal., June 7, 1913.

Mr. James R. Carret,
79 Milk Street, Boston, Mass.

My dear Classmate,—Yours of May 7th to hand in due time. In reply to your inquiries I would say:—

1. Residence same as formerly; business address, 1007 Union Oil Building.

2. Occupation, Mining Engineer and Manufacturing.

An incident has occurred that does not admit of my being away from our city at this time, and I very much regret to say that I will not be able to be with you this Quinquennial. Until quite recently I have fully intended joining you and having a royal good time with you all on this occasion.

I am only seventy-six the last of this month, and I have already promised myself to join you at several of the Quinquennials yet to come.

My kind regards and best wishes for long life and prosperity to all other classmates gathered round the festive board.

Yours affectionately,

F. C. Garbutt.

Address: 1007 Union Oil Building, Los Angeles, Cal.
Residence: 2110 Ocean View Avenue, Los Angeles, Cal.

THOMAS HERBERT GRAY. Born 1844.

Of the firm of T. H. Gray & Co., manufacturers and dealers in wool fibres in Boston. The Secretary quotes from a letter received from him dated June 10, 1913:—

"I have very little to say in reply to yours of the 3d asking for any information worthy of note since the last report. I do not remember that I ever made more than one report, although various and sundry happenings have taken place since then, but not of sufficient importance to make any record of. I have been to Europe twice, I have been west to Seattle and down the coast to Los Angeles, going by the northern and returning home by the southern route. Have made several trips in the South and West, hunting small game. About thirty years or so ago I did quite a little long-range rifle shooting, winning several prizes at 1,000 yards, including the championship gold medal at 600, 800, and 1,000 yards, and incidentally getting on the American Rifle Team that went to England and won the championship, although I had to get a substitute, as I could not get away. A year ago I took a trip to Bermuda, which, I expect, will be my last for that section of the country unless they have better means of procuring water than the present roof drainage."

CHARLES LORING JACKSON. Born 1847.

Professor of Chemistry Emeritus in Harvard University. He writes to the Secretary under date of May 28, 1913:—

"My life has run quietly and pleasantly with teaching and research in Harvard University during the winters and gardening at Pride's Crossing in the summers.

"In 1910–11 I had a sabbatical year, spent principally abroad, and took up my work again in the autumn of 1911, feeling remarkably well. My health had made occasional absences necessary during the last ten years, one of which lasted a whole year. But, although the first half of the year 1911–12 went off very successfully, I found in February, 1912, that I no longer was well enough to bear the great fatigue of experimental lectures to over three hundred men, and accordingly resigned my professorship, to take effect September 1, 1912, when I was appointed professor emeritus, and by the kindness of the Corporation allowed to keep my private laboratory in Boylston Hall and my room in Holworthy. I have now lived in the college buildings longer than any one of whom I have seen the record. At the time of my retirement I had been longer in the service of the College than any of my active colleagues, and was the only teacher not appointed by President Eliot.

"My year as an emeritus has been very pleasant with the absence of overwork, and especially as I have continued my researches with three private assistants, who cannot be members of the University, as there is a strict rule against teaching in the Carnegie Foundation, from which most of my pension comes.

*JOHN LINDSLEY. Born 1845.

Born in Boston, May 12, 1845.

Almost immediately after graduation he went to China, and entered mercantile business in the employ of Frazar & Co. of Shanghai. In June, 1872, he was admitted a partner in the firm. With the exception of something more than a year and a half passed in the Australian Colonies on business for his house and another year and a half spent in the United States, he lived in the Far East, at Shanghai, Hong Kong, and Yokohoma, Japan, until June, 1895, when he returned to the United States, and settled in Milton, Mass., for the education of his children. He left Milton in October, 1898, and returned to Yokohoma, and remained there in the business of his firm for nearly four years. He finally returned to Milton in July, 1902, and there remained for the rest of his life, spending, however, something more than a year in a trip to Europe in 1905 and 1906. He died in Milton, June 4, 1909.

A fuller biographical sketch of him will be published later in a supplement to this Report. The Secretary adds an appreciation of him prepared by our classmate, William G. Peckham:—

JOHN LINDSLEY.

In an English country churchyard, close to Wales, a tombstone bears an exceptional epitaph:—

"In America born, in Europe bred,
In Africa travelled, in Asia wed."

Lindsley's life was even more varied. In college he led in the assemblies, was a favorite in Cambridge society, and a leader in college societies. But few know, even now, that it was his influence in 1867 that guided the Class in the excellent selections of its Class Officers. Perhaps there was no other man who was, at the same time, a member of all three of the religious societies and of the Glee Club, of the Pierian, and of the Porcellian, the Pi Eta, and of the Phi Beta Kappa. It always seemed an attribute of his strength that he left

Boston, once and for all, on graduating; for he was distinctly a qualified Bostonian. Without delay, after graduation, he went to China, and in five years was admitted as partner in one of the great Oriental mercantile firms. In his business enterprises in Singapore, Saigon, Hong Kong, and the Chinese ports, in New South Wales, Queensland, and Japan, his success was complete. He developed various commercial enterprises, including a coal mine in Australia; and, wherever he was, he was honored by all classes of men, yet he wrote back:—

"Until within the past fortnight I had hoped to be with you at the Class Supper, but now I find I must give up the plan. . . . I am sure that great changes have taken place in the minds and persons of you all, but the men I recall are those who danced around the Elm at the back of Harvard Hall."

Sometimes he wrote to us of the "horrid monsters which infest the ocean off the coasts of Sumbawa, Bali, Lombok, and Flores, and the serpents seen swimming near the vessel which make the wonderful stories one occasionally hears seem somewhat less incredible."

"Many of the above-mentioned islands have active volcanoes, some of which rise, almost perpendicularly, to a great height, directly from the water's edge. Their lurid fires at night, reflected on the water, and the barren, ash-covered cone, in strong contrast with the adjacent mountains, covered with luxuriant vegetation to their peaks, form an impressive scene."

"I made a short trip to Johore with an officer in the employ of the Rajah, crossing the narrow strait at the back of the Island of Singapore, across which tigers swim from the main land, thus keeping a stock on hand in spite of the efforts of the colonial authorities to exterminate them."

Again he wrote of his happy marriage, and of his happiness in his children, and told us of his establishing branch houses of his firm in India, China, and Japan, and casually mentioned that he had been elected President of the Chamber of Commerce in Japan. Indeed, he evidently became the leader of the merchants in various foreign ports; for in after years he was again elected Chairman of a Chamber of Commerce, and President of the Asiatic Association in China.

Finally, he took the Forbes house in Milton, Massachusetts, and, excepting incidental travels in Italy, the Tyrol, Switzerland, and France, maintained a model housekeeping at Milton and in Paris, with his trained Japanese servants, who went round the world with him.

Lindsley had a large collection of very precious works of Japanese art. These made his house a proper place of residence for such a family as his. His classmates will miss the Japanese Christmas cards that he sent for years from all parts of the world.

Francis J. Child read to Lindsley and to his classmates a verse that described Lindsley's course. Professor Child influenced the course of Harvard men of the time.

"He had ridden, no man farther,
As well in Christendom, as in Heathenesse,
And ever honored for his worthinesse."

*EDWARD WINDSOR MEALEY.

Born in Hagerstown, Md., 1846. Died in Hagerstown, April 28, 1911.

A full and interesting sketch of Mealey was published in the Secretary's Report of 1907, No. 12, p. 29, which touched particularly upon his work in connection with founding the Washington County Free Library at Hagerstown. The well-known saying of Shakespeare regarding the departed, "The good is oft interred with their bones," is not true of him.

Through our classmates, Peckham and Leverett, I received some time since the tenth annual report of the library. I take the following from the report of the president, Mr. J. Spangler Kieffer, dated October 1, 1911:—

"Within the past year the Library has sustained a heavy loss through the death of Mr. William Newcomer, one of the most valued members of the Board, and of its President, Mr. Edward W. Mealey. . . .

"In the death of Mr. Mealey the Library has experienced what may well seem an irreparable loss. Mr. Mealey was a characteristic and representative citizen of Hagerstown. He was deeply interested in his native place. Though educated in New England and often travelling abroad in Europe, it was characteristic of him that he never lost his interest in and care for the place to which he belonged, and the people among whom he had been born and brought up. He was interested not only in their material and commercial, but also in their intellectual and moral well-being. His public spirit and his ideas of public service were manifested in various ways; not least, in connection with the movement which resulted in the establishment of the Washington County Free Library. It is not too much to say that, next to Mr. B. F. Newcomer, this community is indebted to the liberality and labors of Mr. Mealey for the origination of the Library which has been so great a distinction and honor to our city and county, and which, under the management of the Librarian whom he was the means of securing for it, has developed into so important and beneficent an educational institution. From the beginning of its existence until his death, he served as President of its Board of Trustees; he managed its finances; he planned for the supply of its needs; it was by his judgment and counsel, chiefly, that its affairs were directed; and, by the provisions of his will, he has become its principal benefactor. Thus, even though he is gone, he will continue to serve, from generation to generation, the institution in which, while he lived, he took so great an interest. And as long as this Library shall exist, his name, and his services in its behalf, will be held in grateful remembrance."

And the following from the report of the Librarian, Miss Mary L. Titcomb:—

"The dominant note in the opening months of the second decade of the existence of the Library is one of sadness.

"To all connected with the institution, the news of the sudden and untimely death of Mr. Edward Windsor Mealey, the President of the Board of Trustees, came with a sense of overwhelming loss. Mr. Mealey was one of those rare individuals who gave to every public institution he served the same conscientious attention that he paid to his private affairs. An acute man of business, the Library had always benefited by his sagacity. A man of trained brain and scholarly habit, he thoroughly understood what the fundamentals of a library should be, and laid its foundations broad and deep. A lover of the beautiful, a man of world-wide observation, he was quick to grasp the significance of any movement for the higher life of the city of his birth, and gave his cordial support to every attempt to make the Library stand as an exemplar of the liberal arts as well as a disseminator of books. A man of varied and important interests in the world of business, he yet found time for an almost daily visit to the Library, and consequently acquired an intimate knowledge and intelligent interest in all phases of its work. To the librarian and staff he was a tower of strength. As long as faithful service was rendered, each one knew that in him was to be found a loyal and disinterested friend.

"Mr. Mealey's own peculiar place on this Board can never be precisely filled, and to the institution which he loved, and which he remembered in his death, his name will always be a precious memory."

On a postal card received from him in 1911 is pasted an advertisement of his ranch, from which it appears that it contains 1,000 acres, is on or near a new branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway, is capable of irrigation, and near Fort Steele in British Columbia. He writes also that in 1911 he travelled in Spain, Portugal, and Morocco.

In 1912 he made an extensive trip in Russia. He is President of the Harvard Club of New Jersey, and has written on art subjects.

*JOHN WINTHROP SPOONER.

Born in Dorchester, Mass., September 20, 1845. Died in Hingham, Mass., June 19, 1910. Son of Dr. John Phillips Spooner (H. C. 1817, M.D. Harvard 1820) and of Abigail E. (Tuckerman) Spooner.

After graduation he entered the Harvard Medical School, and received his degree there in March, 1871, and at the same time was admitted a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society. He entered the Boston City Hospital as senior house physician in May, 1870. An opening occurring at Hingham, Mass., he left the hospital before the close of his year, and settled in Hingham to practise his profession on March 24, 1871, and there in the exercise of his calling passed the rest of his life.

He was married to Marion R. Baker, of Hingham, May 28, 1873, and had two children: John Winthrop Spooner, born January 15, 1878; and Lesley Hinckley Spooner, born August 22, 1881 (H. C. 1903, M.D. Harvard Medical School 1907).

An enumeration of the societies of which he was a member and the positions of trust and honor, public and private, to which he was chosen or appointed, clearly indicates the respect and esteem in which he was held in his community:—

Member of the School Committee of Hingham in 1873, and continuing for twenty-eight years, during the last five of which he was chairman of the Board; Trustee of the Hingham Public Library in 1879; Trustee of Derby Academy in 1885; Medical Examiner for Plymouth County, appointed for a seven years' term in 1886, and successively reappointed thereafter and being in the midst of his fourth term at the time of his decease; member of the Massachusetts Medico-Legal Society in 1887; Vice-President of it in 1903 and 1904, and President of it in 1905 and 1906; Trustee of the Hingham Institution for Savings in 1890; member of the Norfolk South District Medical Society; for many years chairman of the Board of Health in Hingham; Vice-President of the City Hospital Alumni Association; Councillor of Harvard Medical Alumni Association.

Although it involves some repetition, I add a minute in regard to him prepared for the Norfolk South District Medical Society by its committee:—

"In the death of Dr. John Winthrop Spooner (June 19, 1910) the Norfolk South District Medical Society desire to testify that they have met with a very serious loss. Dr. Spooner came of illustrious medical antecedents. His grandfather, Dr. William Spooner (A.B. Harvard 1778, M.D. Edinburgh 1785), practised in Boston, and was one of the first councillors of the Massachusetts Medical Society. He was also an overseer of Harvard College and a member of the State Senate. His father, Dr. John Phillips Spooner (A.B. Harvard 1817, M.D. Harvard 1820), practised in Dorchester and was one of the incorporators of the Boylston Medical Society, which is the oldest medical school society in the country. Dr. Lesley H. Spooner, son of our deceased associate, makes the fourth doctor in direct line.

"Dr. John Winthrop Spooner was born in Dorchester, September 20, 1845; graduated from Harvard College in 1867, and from its Medical School in 1871. He served as medical house officer in the Boston City Hospital in 1870. Settling in Hingham in 1871, he has bestowed untiring devotion upon his patients for the long term of thirty-nine years. He has been Medical Examiner of the fifth district of Plymouth County since 1886, and has served as president of the Massachusetts Medico-Legal Society, and also of the Norfolk South District Medical Society. Beside his medical work, he has been prominent in educational and public affairs and in everything which tended to promote the welfare of the town in which he lived. He was for twenty-eight years a member of the School Committee, for many years a trustee of Derby Academy, and president of the board for several recent years. He was also a trustee of the Hingham Public Library, a director in the Hingham Institution for Savings, and for many years chairman of the Board of Health.

"Dr. Spooner possessed a particularly noble and large-hearted nature. His patients, realizing his strength and sympathy, leaned upon him and were inspired by him to an unusual degree. His tastes were simple, his manner frank and cordial, and his instincts led him always to support high standards in the medical profession as well as in the community. The loss of such a man is irreparable, both to the profession in which he was an acknowledged leader and to the community in which he was an earnest, true, and broad-minded citizen, a wise and skilful physician, and a loyal and sympathetic friend. We shall miss his strong and cheering personality, his able counsel, his helpful support of our meetings, and his active participation in all matters pertaining to the progress of medicine.

"Let us hope that his strong influence and example will bear fruit wherever his acquaintance extended, and that his noble qualities will live in other lives, as surely as they will be treasured in the hearts of the members of the Norfolk South District Medical Society.

"For the Society,

J. A. Gordon, M.D.,
G. W. Tinkham, M.D.,
Oliver H. Howe, M.D.,
Committee."

Born in Nashua, N.H., May 31, 1846.

He attended the Harvard Law School in the year 1868, and studied architecture at 19 Pemberton Square, Boston, early in 1869. Later in that year he became a Civil Engineer, and was employed until 1886 in railroad work in New Hampshire and Massachusetts, and also for some time as private secretary of his father, the Hon. Onslow Stearns, president of the Old Colony Railroad Company, making his residence in Boston and later having an office, as a Civil Engineer, in Boston. In 1886 he became a member of the firm of John A. Lowell & Co., engravers, in Boston. From time to time he made trips abroad. In 1899 he left the firm of John A. Lowell & Co., and became interested in the manufacture of woollens with a mill at Schaghticoke, N.Y. and continued a resident of Boston with that business interest until his death. He died in Boston, October 3, 1911.

JAMES BRAINERD TAYLOR. Born 1845.

Teacher. Residence, Newtonville, Mass.

The Secretary quotes the following from a letter received from him dated May 11, 1913:—

"I am rounding up my forty-second year of uninterrupted teaching, my fortieth in Boston, and never a day off in all that time on account of health. I believe, when the last Report came out, I had sold out at Berkeley and Chauncy Hall, and started the Steinert Hall Preparatory School in the fall of 1894. I stayed there five years, when our lease of five rooms for five years in Steinert Hall Building expired, and I had a call back to my old room and desk in the Young Men's Christian Association Building, where I had been for twenty years before the five at Steinert Hall. This offer was to take the head of the English Department in the new Young Men's Christian Association Preparatory School. I had already been Dean of the Evening Preparatory School of the Young Men's Christian Association. That was in 1909, and in January following the Young Men's Christian Association burnt down, one morning before school time. Since then we have been in the old Boston University Buildings in Ashburton Place, but next fall will occupy our very fine new building on Huntington Avenue, said to be the largest building of the kind in the world."

He also gives the following brief summary of his occupations since graduation: 1867–71, studied law and theology; 1871–73, Professor of Oratory, Bowdoin College; 1873–84, Teacher of English, Chauncy Hall School: 1884–96, Senior Principal of Berkeley Preparatory School; 1896–1904, Senior Principal Berkeley and Chauncy Hall; 1904–09, Principal of Steinert Hall Preparatory School; 1909–13, Head of English Department, Huntington Avenue School, Young Men's Christian Association; 1913, Head of History Department, Huntington Avenue School, Young Men's Christian Association.

In a postscript to another letter dated May 30, 1913, he says:—

"I suppose I have done something the last few years that perhaps —no, probably, no other Harvard graduate has done, viz.: taken a University Extension course six seasons running. I have taken these courses for general culture, and to know what the 'new lights' are in education. I took two in literature, two in philosophy (ancient and modern), two in history, and one in composition, and I have enjoyed them with unwearied enthusiasm."

*GEORGE HENRY TRIPP.

The Secretary quotes the following from a letter received from him dated May 10, 1913:—

"I am just in receipt of yours of the 8th inst., advising me of the intention to have a class dinner this year. I am so sorry that it will be impossible for me to be present. I have made up my mind not to miss such occasions hereafter, as there will be but few of them, but unfortunately, so far as this year is concerned, I have my passage already engaged for Europe, sailing on the 10th of June, so of course I shall have to get off for this year.

"There is not much that I can add for your coming Class Report. I was elected a member of the Constitutional Convention which sat in this State last year, and served for three months until April 4, when I was laid up with an attack of erysipelas that very nearly ended my days and put me on the shelf for six months. I got back to the office in the latter part of October, but was not good for much for a month or six weeks after. Now, however, I am in very good condition save for a slight lameness resulting from the surgeon's knife."

CHARLES HENRY WIGHT.

Continues as General Agent of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York. He writes in a letter to the Secretary dated May 14, 1913,—

CLASS OF 1867 SCHOLARSHIP.

Our classmate, SAMUEL HOAR, acted for the executor of the will of Robert Treat Paine, late of Brookline, and whatever fee he received would diminish the amount to be ultimately paid to the College under the will. He was paid two thousand dollars, and disposed of it June 1, 1886, as follows:—

"I give to the President and Fellows of Harvard College the sum of two thousand dollars, to be by them invested and the income thereof annually added to the principal, until the principal shall be thereby increased to twenty-five hundred dollars; and thereafter the net income shall be annually paid at or near the beginning of the second half of each College year, to some member of the Freshman Class, in the Academic Department of Harvard College, who shall seem to the said President and Fellows meritorious and in need of assistance.

"Said fund and the accumulation and income shall be known as the CLASS OF 1867 SCHOLARSHIP, and in the distribution of the income thereof children or grandchildren of members of the Class of 1867 of Harvard College, who are deemed worthy, shall be preferred."

The fund was increased by subscriptions from other classmates amounting to $515.86 in 1887 and 1888, and a legacy of $1,000 from Clement Kelsey Fay in 1898, making a total of $3,515.86 paid to the College. According to the last annual statement of the Treasurer of Harvard College, the fund amounted to $4,876.13, and is available for the purposes for which it was established.

The following is an extract from the will of Clement Kelsey Fay:—

"I give to the President and Fellows of Harvard College one thousand dollars, to be added by them to the principal of the Class of 1867 Scholarship Fund, originally created by my classmate, Samuel Hoar, Esquire, and to be held by them upon the same trust and for the uses specified in his original gift."

Our classmate, William G. Peckham, added $2,000 to this fund in the year 1911.

APPENDIX.

APPENDIX.

On May 6, 1913, I received from Mr. Benjamin P. Ellis a letter dated 5th May, 1913, with an enclosure, the letter being as follows:—

"It seems to me that the Secretary of the Class of '67 might be interested in the enclosed which I found on looking through some letters of my uncle, the late Prof. J. M. Peirce. My father was William R. Ellis of your class."

I subjoin a copy of the paper. It has no date, but some one has written in pencil at the top of it, "Nov. 1864." The "Union demonstration" was undoubtedly the great torchlight procession in Boston in favor of the re-election of Abraham Lincoln on the evening of Friday, November 4, 1864. A large number of the undergraduates marched in this procession.

"We the undersigned, members of the Sophomore Class, respectfully ask that the Mathematical Examination of next Saturday may be postponed, in order that we may participate in the Union demonstration of Friday night.

Those who were present at the Class Supper of 1906 will doubtless remember the letter of which E. C. Clarke told us that he had written to President Roosevelt about angora goats. The President, after reading it to his Cabinet, gave it out to the reporters with the injunction not to print the name of the writer. It is given here as published in the Boston Herald with head-line embellishments by the reporter:—

WILL SWAP GOATS FOR A CONSULATE.

New Hampshire Ruralist, who bit on Government Angora Bulletin, tells President all his Real Sorrows since.

[Special Despatch to the Boston Herald.]

Washington, D.C., June 21, 1905.—The President has received this letter from a New Hampshire farmer:

"Mr. President: I regret to call your attention to the angora goat department of the bureau of agriculture. It has spread broadcast a document commending angoras to the farmers of the country. This contains three specious landscapes.

"'Before Goating' shows a dense jungle, suggesting the average New Hampshire pastures. 'One Year after Goating' shows the same land producing a valuable crop of bean poles. 'Two Years after Goating' shows a lawn suitable for golf links. The omnivorous appetite of angoras is described in a way that led me to hope they might even effect a saving in blasting powder, the chief source of expense in farming hereabout.

"I procured a flock at considerable cost. The result of the first interview of my dog and the buck caused me to name the latter Togo. His views on the subject of race suicide, I think, would receive your approval. The does, on the other hand, neglect their kids so shamelessly that I fear they belong to a female goat club.

"I enclosed the flock with a fence highly recommended to me by the American Steel & Wire Company. I now suspect that this company may be a trust and should be investigated. The goats began by thrusting their heads through the upper part of the fence, where they hung by their horns. When tired of this, they went through, under, and over the fence.

"I make no complaint that they ate a valuable rose garden belonging to a neighbor; but their conduct in my own vegetable garden entitles me to relief. When pursued, their rapidity of movement might suggest ideas to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in connection with its Chicago-New York service. If interested, it can obtain the flock on easy terms, not necessitating a new bond issue.

"I leave the matter, Mr. President, to your sense of justice. A consulate near good fishing ground would be appreciated."

LONG SINCE: HARVARD'S OLD CLASSICAL COURSE

Read at our Fortieth Anniversary, Commencement, 1907.

Long since, in Harvard's ancient halls,
  Homer we sadly wrought:
Paris we scorn'd, but Helen,—no,—
  Though woe to Troy she brought.

Of gods and wars, and goddess' wrath,
  Sonorous Virgil sung:
Of men and women Chaucer troll'd
  All in our mother tongue.

Admirers of Antigone
  And wise Egeria,
Pensive we pulled by Dido's pyre,
  And reached Lavinia.

Ere yet the bowl was at the well,
  We fashion'd fancies quaint
Of dames and squires eyes never saw,
  Nor art can ever paint.

Whatever hour Aurora rose,
  Dawn's rosy-finger'd child,
Her touch on us tipp'd pages bright
  Of romaunts sweet and wild.

Sitting a steed with spur and sword,
  Of metal superfine,
We join'd crusades, with pilgrims sung,
  And rode toward Palestine.

And Plein d'Amour and Sir Artour,
  Sir Bevis and Sir Guy,
We wed to damsels fair and rare
  That titles could not buy.

Toward fame and honor, love and Truth,
  Our earliest course was run,
Predestin'd paths, John Harvard points
  To every Harvard son.

From dream-land exil'd long and far,
  Harvard is still our home;
Where still young hearts bide ever young,
  Until no more they roam.

Since Agamemnon, kings have liv'd;
  Since Bayard, knights a score;—
John Harvard had leal sons, a host,
  As true in peace and war.

From Plymouth to Luzon some built
  Town, state and law and way;
No praise but God's and ours is theirs;
  His adjutants were they.

The others led the hosts in arms,
  Their monuments we rais'd,
Their trophies hung in halls, long since,
  Them long the poets praised.

Brave hearts beyond would call us on,
  And singers silent long;
But Harvard's halls forever stand,
  All jubilant with song.

Our roses bloom but for a day,
  Then haste, as do all flowers,
Away: as beauty does, and strength,
  As honors do, and powers.

Our best-belov'd our roses were,
  That earliest fared on:
Long since, as stars that light us home,
  Their light on us has shone.

W. G. Peckham, '67.

THE WISDOM OF YOUTH.

FOR "SIXTY-SEVEN."

On the Fortieth Anniversary of the Class.

When we came to old Harvard in the heyday of life,
We thought not of care, we knew naught of strife;
Some studied, some boated, some played on the Delta,
And others went off on a grand helter-skelter;
Each one inspired with youthful ambition
To distinguish himself or else go to perdition.

Then leave to the tutors their vain expectations,
Strict and severe let the Faculty be;
Ever the sensible men of all nations
Look at each other, and nod and agree.

The Sophomores challenged our class to a game,
But we soon sent them back to the place whence they came.
Behold their tall leader on the plain lying low!
He was sent to the grass by Roderick Dhu Coe.
For the first time in years the cry has resounded,
The Freshmen are victors; the Sophs are confounded!

So let the professors draw down their faces,
Strict and severe let the President be;
Ever the sensible men of all races
Stand by each other, and wink and agree.

In coaches a dozen we went to Point Shirley;
We came rather late, and we did not leave early;
In speeches and song and champagne we revelled,
But never a head on the table was levelled.
The full moon was setting over Beacon Hill's dome
When, weary with feasting, we groped our way home.

So will the young horse ever prance in the traces,
Strict and sedate though his driver may be;
For sensible men of all countries and races
Drink to each other, and jest and agree.

In vain did the Faculty try to repress us;
Of the right of free speech they would dispossess us;
They cut down our tree with the axe of tradition,
But another grew up with all expedition.
The acorn of free journalism we planted
Has grown to an oak,—it stands there undaunted.

Then leave to the fogies their old disputations,
Strict and sedate let the Philistines be;
Ever the wise of all ages and nations
Stand by each other, and nod and agree.

Old Harvard has grown in breadth and extension,
And also maybe somewhat in pretension.
Its courses are vast; its gates are portentous:
'Tis not like the Harvard where our parents once sent us.
That dwells in our hearts, and fond fancy retraces
The life that we led there,—brings back the young faces.

So leave to the pedants their vain disputations,
Strict and sedate let the wiseacres be.
Ever the sensible men of all nations
Pledge one another, and drink and agree.

Then a tear for those from whom we have parted,
And a grasp of the hand for those that are here!
It is a long way from the place whence we started,
And still we move onward—onward each year.

[No date, probably written in July, 1911.]

My dear Mrs. Lincoln:

I am moved to write to you not only to express my personal sense of grief and bereavement at Frank Lincoln's untimely death, and to assure you that it is a common grief to all his college classmates, whom he had served so loyally and affectionately for so many years, but in a way to acquit myself of a duty that I had anticipated much pleasure in performing, namely, by giving to you a brief and imperfect account of our recent Class Dinner, as I had intended to give it to him.

I was glad to be able to be of use to Frank in completing certain arrangements about the dinner, and in attending to certain matters connected with the Commencement Day reunion. I am particularly glad, in the event, that I had so recent and so intimate an opportunity to discuss class matters and class members with him. His disappointment at not being able to be present was keen, but he said he thought he was "man enough to bear it." In considering the possibility of going to the dinner notwithstanding his disability, he said he felt perfectly able to do so, but that any such act would be the cause of anxiety to you, and he therefore rejected the thought without hesitation. On my query why he had not asked Eliot Clarke to manage the dinner, since he had been chosen, a few years ago, as Frank's substitute and possible successor, in case of need, he said that Clarke had not answered his card of inquiry concerning being present at the dinner, and that in view of a recent domestic bereavement of Clarke's he "had not the heart to ask him." On my further suggestion that some one else than myself would make a better presiding officer, he suggested Leverett, and it was Leverett who presided.

In considering the plan of speaking at the dinner and the fact that three of our members had recently died, within a few days of each other, Frank said that he had always tried not to make the dinners lugubrious by dwelling too much on those we had lost, but that there were two at least whom we must speak of. Dr. Spooner he could himself have eulogized best, and he emphasized to me the large place of usefulness and service that Spooner had made for himself and the high estimation in which he was held in the community that he served. Our classmate Mealey had won first the interest of the class through the circumstances under which he came to college (from Maryland, at the end of the war), then their respect by his many generous and public-spirited acts in his home town, and finally their affection by his genial disposition and his own sentimental attachment to the class. It fell to me, as his seat-mate in college days, to speak of him, and Frank supplied me with what documents and recent information he had secured about him and about the circumstances of his death. Several others, who from illness or absence were not likely to be present at the dinner, we mentioned, and I was glad to learn some personal facts that were, perhaps, known to none of us except to Frank himself.

Under the circumstances the course of proceedings at the dinner was necessarily somewhat informal. Eliot Clarke appeared, but declined to take the chair. He was delegated to visit Frank and to convey to him our sense of disappointment at his absence and to "smile at him." One or two others came who had not announced themselves, and one or two were missing who had expected to come. Cleveland, Peckham, Wight, Waller, Wadsworth, came from New York, Hutchinson from Philadelphia, F. J. Clark from Maine. Waller, who had not been present since 1892, spoke interestingly about chemistry and religion as not incompatible. F. J. Clark recalled college days and President Hill. Cook came from Pittsfield, and told us he had brought Davis with him, but that, as we had gone into dinner, Davis would not come in. Leverett introduced Peckham with a reference to his recent gift of $2,000 towards increasing the Class of 1867 Scholarship Fund. Peckham referred amusingly to our quondam classmate Braman and to the "Harvard agriculturists" with whom he happened to be sitting (Wadsworth, Chenery, and others). Leverett followed up the suggestion by calling upon the "Old Farmer" of the "Almanac," and Ware spoke feelingly of his old school and college mate Spooner, as did Churchill, "the longest a judge in the State of Massachusetts."

Cook, the only clergyman present, spoke of Davis; and of his own useful and interesting work as a sort of minister at large, and also as court probation officer in Berkshire. On his way down he had visited his Berkshire "boys" at the Concord Reformatory, bringing to them some branches of the mountain laurel that would remind them of their home and their freedom, and noted that, whether or not providentially, he had exactly enough sprigs to give each man one. He spoke of his work, comparing himself to the "trouble man" of the electrical companies, who had nothing to do when everything was working right, but who was summoned when anything went wrong, and was expected to cure the trouble. We had some stories of Davis's athletic prowess, of a quick cut of a whip when on horseback he was attacked by a company of hoodlums, and the comment that it was fortunate for his antagonists that his human temper was curbed by a spiritual purpose.

Cleveland spoke feelingly of the last days of Montgomery, who died of a malignant disease, and of his old uncle, "Father Cleveland," who lived to be within sixteen days of one hundred years old, only to be prematurely taken off by an accident, in the full possession of his faculties, and regretting that he could not live sixteen days longer.

Cushing answered for the doctors, commended the good health of those present, referred to his college interests and his professional work and its lighter and darker sides, speaking particularly of the naturalness of death, little realizing how close we were to its presence. Taylor regretted that he had lived at home in Boston during his college course. He has seen to it that his own boys should join in the college life. Dodge, "Judge Dodge," made the most finished talk of the evening, calling attention to the very interesting forty-four years of the college's and the country's growth and development since our graduation.

The evening was much enjoyed, in spite of those whom we missed. But it was the farthest from our thoughts that Frank was more than temporarily missing from his accustomed place.

I have typewritten this letter, for your and my convenience, but with my own unskilled hand, so that, I hope, it has not lost its personal character. With deepest sympathy, I am,

Yours most sincerely,

Geo. C. Mann.
